Sarah Phillips has been hired as the Marin Resource Conservation District's urban streams coordinator.

Phillips will work with landowners who are near sensitive streams and creeks to help them protect and improve their properties while also protecting nearby water resources. Her position is funded by the county.

Phillips held a similar position in the South Yuba River watershed since 2011. She helped resolve conflicting demands of the water agencies, creekside landowners, users of private water wells and advocacy groups. She also managed grant funds for watershed improvement projects.
